Things are well underway. It seems to be very exciting and it requires a lot of my time and energy and everything is looking good. Now i'm a single person. I am about to invest about $1000 of my time and energy for this and i want to make sure that i will get something out of this. I will have to set my expectations higher than a prototype or MVP if i expect anything at all. I don't have a clear goal or purpose behind this. I want to learn a new language, resolve some architectural issues & get some new skills. I have a few ideas around what to explore and there's a nice intersection between what i'm wanting to learn and what i'm doing (making a 4G data connection from a cell phone to a computer). What should i expect from this project? I'm not getting any return on my investment. What should i expect from this in terms of time, money and, above all, fun? ===== cimmanom I'd suggest sticking with a single developer if possible. You're better off with a single developer, IMO, as they are working on a single thing with their focus completely on them, and very little rework/refactoring is needed. If you have
